

Tips for Finding a Military Love Match Online

---

For singles looking to meet that special someone, the traditional dating landscape can often seem like a rocky course to navigate. Just when you've found some solid footing, you hit a land mine or lose your grip, sending you back to square one. It's difficult enough to find love in the "real world"—but for those serving their country in the armed forces, there's a whole new set of challenges.

As a member of the military, meeting someone who shares your interests, values, morals, and life goals can seem next to impossible. But with the global reach of the Internet, a quality connection may be closer than you think. Military dating websites are quickly growing in popularity as a safe, effective way for men and women in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, and other armed forces to forge new friendships that could grow into enduring, romantic relationships.

As you browse through the dozens of available singles on our website, consider the following tips for maximizing your chances of finding your ideal match:

- Create a great profile. This is by far the most important tool to have in your online dating arsenal. Post a flattering, accurate photo, clearly outline what you're looking for in a partner, and add some unique, real-life stories that illustrate your personality. Don't just say you're a hard worker—include an anecdote about a time you went above and beyond to meet the call of duty. By putting in the effort to flesh out and polish up your profile, you'll show that you're personally invested in your search for Miss Right.
- Remember your audience. When penning your profile, tailor it to capture the interests of the kind of woman you'd like to meet. Don't just rattle off the traits and activities that would appeal to your buddies or your mother. Avoid any verbiage that borders on negative, sexist, or bitter—even if it's supposed to be a joke. While you definitely don't want to misrepresent yourself, try to think of things you can add that will attract viable partners.
- Set a daily limit. It can be tempting to spend all of your down time browsing through profiles, but it's best to establish some boundaries. Like any pursuit, moderation is key—by limiting yourself to a maximum of one or two hours per day, you'll avoid getting burned out and will increase your chances of making a lasting connection.

- Don't let geography limit your options. Instead of automatically restricting your search to your surrounding area or hometown, expand the scope to include a broader range. After getting to know each other online and on the phone, you can schedule a visit during your next leave. If she turns out to be “the one”, relocating to be with her won't seem like much of a sacrifice.
- Make it personal. When sending a message to a prospective partner, avoid “form emails” with introductions that sound rehearsed. Tailor your messages to her situation and interests. For instance, if her profile says she enjoys hiking and backpacking, start out by asking her about her latest sojourn. This shows that you took the time to see what she's all about and are genuinely interested in her, rather than just cutting and pasting the same message to dozens of women.

Using a military dating site is hands-down the safest, easiest, and most cost-effective ways for members of the armed forces to browse profiles of available singles, post their own profiles, meet new people online, and potentially pursue long-lasting romantic relationships. By incorporating these tips, you'll help to set your profile apart from all the rest, and make a memorable impact on the type of woman you want to attract.